Dear Mike:

25X1

We shall of course continue to make Mr. [redacted] available to you to serve [redacted]

[redacted] will be moved to our headquarters building as base for his briefing function to the Executive Offices. He will be available to provide occasional briefings for your Department officials should special circumstances require.

Yours,

ON-FILE TREASURY RELEASE INSTRUCTIONS

THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY
WASHINGTON 20220

MAY 17 1977

CONFIDENTIAL

Dear Stan:

We have finally completed our review of intelligence support activities at the Department of the Treasury. I have concluded that the Treasury's liaison with the intelligence community and its requirements for intelligence support can adequately be handled by a staff of 12 rather than 23. This will mean that we will not require two detailees from your Agency [redacted]

25X1

[redacted] We would, however, be grateful if you could continue to make available to us the services of [redacted]

25X1

I do not know the requirements of the other Departments for economic intelligence but I assume that you will take direct responsibility for assuring that they are adequately served.

The major reason for this reduction is not any dissatisfaction with the work that has been done here, but simply that we believe the work has been duplicative and substantively of marginal importance to our mission. The decisive factor is the President's pressure to slim down the size of our part of the Federal bureaucracy.

Sincerely,

W. Michael Blumenthal
